The Tri-City Youth Court was established in 2015. The court is primarily administered by School Resource Officer Tracy Preece and Lorrie Frazier from North Ogden Police Department and they have been instrumental in the success of the program. The cities of North Ogden, Pleasant View, and Harrisville participate in the court program with referrals coming from parents, schools, or police departments.

This court program offers an opportunity to empower communities to fight against juvenile delinquency, provide youth with opportunities to learn about and participate in their communities in a positive fashion, and help hold youth accountable for their actions, give back to their community what has been lost, and build skills so they will not be involved in further acts of delinquency in the future.

Youth Court provides an alternative to the juvenile justice system or further school review for appropriate juvenile offenders. It is a diversion program that keeps the offending youth from having a permanent juvenile court record, while holding the youth accountable for their conduct before a court of their peers. The court provides punishment for youth that includes an element of positive peer pressure not available in any other juvenile diversion program. Youth offenders find out that not only adults in society find their conduct objectionable, but that their peers also do not approve. They find that their peers care about them and want them to succeed and build skills to avoid this type of behavior in the future.

High school aged youth are trained to act as judges, attorneys, clerks, and bailiffs in actual criminal cases. The court does not determine guilt but takes youth who admit their mistakes and provides appropriate consequences to promptly hold them accountable for their actions. The youth that volunteer to serve on the Tri-City Youth Court receive school credit, enjoy the association with the other volunteers, and have the opportunity to attend training at the Utah State Youth Court Conference each year.

Solicitors in North Ogden

Every year they come. They come on their own or in groups. You cannot mistake them because they knock on your door when you are right in the middle of something important and they want to sell you product or a service. They are known as solicitors.

To be able to knock on a home a solicitor must contact North Ogden City Business Licensing and make application.

The license is neon green in color. The license will have the applicant's name, address, phone number, the company they work for, a solicitor license number (which is generated by the business license department), their picture and it will also be signed and stamped with the city's seal by the City Recorder.

We are asking our citizens to see this license, if they cannot produce the license then we would like for you to try to get at least the name of the company and phone number that the solicitor is representing and call city hall as soon as possible. The business license department will call the business and let them know that application must be made and that they must stop soliciting until the license can be acquired.
